Short and Good
15,000,000 Years Ago
6 Billion Pounds Yearly
More Reading and Thought

By Arthur Brisbane

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S Christmas day message had all the necessary good qualities. It was short, only 37 words. It needed none of the few words on regrets or wallowing about conditions.

Mr. Hoover uttered the foremost hope for a merry Christmas and happy New Year, and will do all that he can to make the latter real.

There is hard work ahead for everybody, and wishing on Christmas would not make it easier.

In northern Alberta engineers of the Canadian government have discovered the oldest preserved trees in the world. Their branches were gnarled and strange animals, including uncouth, half developed men, fifteen million years ago, when our continent was connected with Asia.

That makes our giant redwood trees, "2000 years old when Christ was born," seem very young.

Hermetically sealed in bitumen sands, safe from the destroying air, the wood was perfectly preserved, with some of its leaves, and the insects that were attacking both, when all were buried together.

Dr. Bailey, of Harvard, proves that one of the trees is a Japanese variety.

Those old trees, growing on a huge continent that included North America and Japan fifteen million years ago, make our few days and little troubles seem less important.

There is trouble on Henry Ford's gigantic rubber plantations in Brazil, where Ford agents are developing six million acres of tropical land. It is interesting to think how many pythons, jaguars and monkeys will be disturbed by tractors and ploughs that are going day and night, working under floodlights in the cooler night hours.

Included among other inhabitants are some human beings that, even being disturbed, and the Brazilian government sends police by airplane to make them realize that Ford is bringing "American living conditions and wages," should be made welcome.

Planting trees always means looking ahead, usually to the next generation. But with rubber it is not so slow. The trees that Ford has already planted in Brazil will yield, ten years hence, six thousand million pounds of rubber a year.

Rubber was Brazil's monopoly until a few years ago. Then Brazil began growing coffee, taking the world by storm, and a clever individual in England successfully moved the rubber growing to his own plantation. It was then unknown. Now Ford promises to bring the rubber rubber production back to the South American continent.

According to Bacon, "reading maketh a full man." British statistics prove that hard long creates more reading. Books of all kinds, including works on science, biology, astronomy, technology, etc., have been read in numerous publications and in total sales.

When life is easy, the average man does little. The Nebraska Republican Independent said he would propose in the next Congress a constitutional amendment abolishing the electoral college to enable "a man to run independent of any party for President."

This could not be done under the present system, Norris said, without the expenditure of large sums of money and organizations in every Congressional district. Senator Norris was not deterred. "If we could start out now and get much of a nucleus" behind a third party movement.

Twenty billion dollars in gold might help the world considerably. Twenty million more thoughts would help it more than any gold. One single accomplishment, however, has thought the production of STEAM POWER, paid all the debts that Napoleon settled on the nation, and gave industry such impetus as never had been dreamed of.

The first day of 1930's last was the last day of 1929. In any minute of the six days an idea came into the world to change the destiny of men for all time.

Gen. Hines, veterans' administrator, has prepared figures to interest veterans of the big war. Some of them are as follows: Some of their widows will last until 2065, which will be 128 years from now.

These last widows, as young women, will marry very old pensioned veterans, and consequently drawing pensions for many years.

The government has already paid five thousand million dollars on veterans' relief. By the end of 1940 it will have paid thirteen billion, three hundred million dollars.

FIGHT FOR LIFE WON BY SAN JOHNSON

St. Louis, Dec. 26 (AP)—San Johnson, former president of the American League, apparently was another victory this time against Old Man Disease.

After 13 weeks in bed, the former owner of baseball was the former "out of the woods" in his fight against diabetes which aggravated a foot infection and threatened for a time to result in the loss of one leg.

Strong of voice and still vitally interested in baseball, Mr. Johnson was sent to several friends yesterday in a St. Louis hospital where he is convalescing.

GANKS PHIL BALL

"I owe my life to Phil Ball," said Mr. Johnson, in the group which included Mr. Ball, head of the St. Louis Browns. "He stepped in and took charge of my case and refused to permit amputation of my leg. At one time I myself felt that nothing could pull me through."

Mr. Johnson then unfolded some of his opinions on present day baseball problems, among them the use of ball and night baseball. He said he had written George B. Saxe, manufacturer of the official baseball, that unless the amount of rubber in present day baseball were reduced, the game in Johnson's opinion, would be seriously impaired.

NIGHT GAMES CONDEMNED

Unless the rubber is reduced, he said, the ball will continue to result in meaningless home runs and hurt both infield and outfield play. He said he believed the reaction from the long-hitting craze will result soon.

"Night baseball has created a curious interest for the time, especially among women, but in my opinion, it is an interest that is of an educational or permanent nature," he said. "Night baseball is not natural. It cannot be permanent. It never will be. It is not the major leagues, and I do not believe it will long continue as a life-saver for the minor leagues."

GAS KILLS TWO IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Dec. 26 (AP)—Gaseous, 28, a war veteran of Co. K, 308th Inf., and John Krasak 35, joint occupant of a tenement in Melville st., were found dead from gas today in different rooms of the tenement.

The bodies were found after a neighborly quest for the odor of gas to their apartment. Patrolmen Joseph Moroney and John Judge broke in the door of the house and found gas flowing from a pipe near the men stretched out on separate beds. Dr. Joseph Rios said they had been dead for several hours. Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed will perform an autopsy. They were mill workers.

SMITH ON AIR FOR BIG GAME TOMORROW

San Francisco, Dec. 26—East meets West tomorrow in the last of the year's greatest football clashes. Some of the greatest football players, gathered from practically every section of the country, have been in training for a week for the game.

It is the only game where the real All-Americans are brought together as teams. And they play for real charity for the little crippled children, who are made well and strong in the Shriner's Hospital here.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, with the Hearst Radio Service co-operating, is again making this great cash available to the rest of the nation.

FAMOUS STARS PLAY

Ernie Smith, Hearst Radio Service announcer, who scored such a signal success with his broadcast of the Notre Dame-U. S. C. game, will be at the microphone.

When such stars as Hart of Chicago, Baker of Pitt, Malachuk of All-American game, Ted Beckets of California, Stan of Richmond, Kimmiller of Oregon, Selby of Ohio State, Brockmeyer of Minnesota, Tim Baugh of Kansas, Broder of Northwestern and a score of others romp on the field, the Columbia network will be tuned in.

Promptly at 2 o'clock Pacific time (3 p. m. E. S. T.) the Columbia network swings into action and from then on Ernie Smith will tell of every move on the field.

NOTABLES TO SPEAK

During half time the Hearst Radio Service has arranged to have Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco, the Governor-elect of California, greet the nation. Noted coaches from various sections of the country will also talk, interpreting the plays of the famous players.

Many other features are planned. The broadcast bids fair to be one of the outstanding of the year. The Columbia Broadcasting System and the Hearst Radio Service invite you to listen.

This broadcast will be heard locally over station WNAC.

Garner Champions $1,000,000,000 Bor-28

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Representative Garner of Texas today was championing legislation for payment to veterans of the present value of their compensation certificates. It would cost about $1,000,000,000, Garner contended, which he said the Treasury could obtain by borrowing at between 1% and 1 1/2% per cent.

Jab of Brain Fluid Makes Any Man a Solomon

Berlin, Dec. 25 (AP)—Prof. Haber, a physician of Innsbruck, says he has found a method of injecting intelligence into the brain. One injection of his fluid, he says, suffices to make sluggish brains work brilliantly. Haber declares that his discovery is based upon the observation that the quality of brain matter can only be increased by adding new brain matter to it. The fluid the professor uses he calls "cerebrotonic." It is a heavily concentrated extract of the brains of oxen and calves. His experiments were first made with guinea pigs, whose food was

Reds and Short Sale Bankers in Bank Row

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Communists and short-selling brokers of bank stock were equally suspected today in official attempts to trace the run that resulted in the closing of the Chelsea Bank & Trust Co. Tuesday. Asst. Dist. Atty. Pilatsky has been assigned to run down rumors that a concerted communist conspiracy has been under way since last bank run.

This led Prof. Haber to try his experiments on human beings. A similar extract of the brains of oxen and calves was given to patients suffering from partial inactivity of the brain. The professor claims that remarkable results have already been obtained. He now intends to develop his method by injecting a fluid into the blood.

SHOPPER LOSES FRIEND COURTS $4500 PEARLS IN FACTORIES

Worcester, Dec. 26.—The loss of a $4500 pearl necklace by a Worcester society matron was revealed today, when a Boston insurance company asked police to aid in the search for it.

The string contains 137 matched pearls and a diamond clasp and is valued as a keepsake.

The name of the woman was carefully guarded by the insurance concern and police alike, both of whom said they were under orders of the insurer.

According to the insurance agent's story to the police, the necklace was lost by his client some time Sunday or Monday night in the Worcester shopping district. The company said it authorized to offer a reward of $500 for the return of the necklace.

3 Drown in Launch Upset

Sausalito, Cal., Dec. 26 (AP).—Three men were believed to have drowned here last night when a launch capsized, throwing its 13 occupants into Richardson's Bay. Ten were rescued by a ferry's lifeboats.

FRIEND COURTS IN FACTORIES

Monroe, Dec. 26 (AP).—"Friendship courts" are to be tried in factories of the Moscow district. They will not exercise the power of fining and imprisoning "offenders" but will be for the purpose of disciplining and reforming workers who are addicted to carelessness, inebriation, loafing and other such habits.

The economic authorities, in their belief to bring to a successful conclusion the famous five-year industrialization plan, has determined that all waste efforts shall be eliminated as far as possible. Most of this waste, they have found, is due to the laxity of the undisciplined workers themselves.

The plan is for each factory to have its own court with a head judge and two assistants elected by the employees for a period of one year. Transfer from a higher to a lower paid job, suspension for a definite period, discharge from the factory and finally deprivation of trade union membership for a stated time are the most severe punishments.

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR FLYING, SAYS LINDY

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, the world's best known flyer, talked today of aviation as it was five years ago and as it is now.

He said this:
"In 1925 a good cruising speed was 50 miles an hour. Today we have planes of the same class with cruising speeds as high as 150 miles an hour. The air mail ships used in 1925 had a carrying capacity of about 400 pounds. Planes today of the same horsepower cruise at least 50 miles an hour faster and carry from three to four times that load."

PLANE'S AIR CAPABILITY
"The same with the business or sport plane flown by the non-professional pilot. It is more stable. It is easier to operate and it is simpler to learn how to fly one."

"A 100-horsepower plane will get from 10 to 15 miles on a gallon of gas, that's with a pilot and two passengers. After 500 or 600 horsepower—which is about 50,000 to 20,000 miles—it will need an over-haul. Afterward it is ready for another 300 or 400 horses, and the total life of a good plane is 2000 hours or more, which is 120,000 miles of flying."

Passenger air travel is increasing. Most of the airlines of the United States on a number of routes without loss on passenger revenue alone he continued. For some time mail and express in addition must be depended on to make air transport operation profitable.

AIR FUTURE BRIGHT
As the efficiency of the airplane increases, he pointed out, the cost of operation will be materially reduced and will shorten the time until passenger operation is a paying business.

The cruising speed of several well-known transport planes has been increased several miles an hour during the past year, Lindbergh remarked, and he expects to see it stepped up at least 10 miles an hour more in 1931.

The best large transport planes today have a cruising speed of 105 to 115 miles an hour and a top speed of 130 to 140 miles.

Boston Sportsman Leads Fox Hunt in France

Paul Francis, Dec. 26 (AP)—Lord Frederick H. Prince of Boston, a group of sports-loving men and women are continuing here in the foothills of the Pyrenees the tradition of fox hunting inaugurated by the late Gordon Bennett early in the present century.

No less enthusiastic is Mrs. Prince, who also has participated in the hunt for many years. With Mr. Prince riding as master of the foxhounds, an honor he has held since 1910, the hunt at Pau now has become regular throughout all Europe.

Two reasons have been advanced for the immense success of the fox hunting in this section, first, because of the topography of the region, and second, because of the spirit of the fowls of Pau which have remarkable endurance and are the fastest to be found.

Fox hunting was inaugurated here by Lord Wellington in 1818 after defeating Marshal Soult at Toulouse. In those days a hunt which numbered 20 cavaliers was large, but now, with 100 riders behind him Mr. Prince complains his friends and guests are deserting him.

The hunt is held three times a week from December until April every year.

Bishop Crieghton denied that any of the so-called Protestant missions in Mexico concerned themselves with the affairs of the country, and said:

"No responsible person gives a serious thought to children as an idea as absorbing Mexico. There is nothing but an anti-severe desire to see Mexico a strong and prosperous neighbor, developing on her own lines under the inspiration of her own social and political philosophy."

Federation Delegates to Discuss Legislation

By NANCY BREWSTER
Delegates representing 137,000 clubwomen of Massachusetts are urged to take action during the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation in January on bills now before the Legislature.

One of the most important bills is the recommendation of the commissioner of public health providing that, within five years, all milk sold in communities of over 2000 shall be either pasteurized or from tuberculin tested cows.

From the recommendations of the federation's committee of the federation a limited number of bills will be selected for approval. Another recommendation of the commissioner of public health to be considered provides for the establishment by the State, under the department of public health, of a hospital and clinics for the treatment of rheumatism.

Besides recording their sentiment on these bills the delegates will be asked to take back to their clubs the pro and con of other important measures to be discussed on an unusually interesting program to be presented by Mrs. Frederick Judk, chairman of legislation.

The keynote of the mid-winter meeting will be "Whither Womanhood," and addresses on this topic will feature a dinner meeting at the Hotel Statler on the evening of Jan. 21, given by Mrs. Axel A. Packard, Mrs. Arthur Devere Potter, Mrs. Frederick C. Smith, Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, Mrs. Herbert G. Gurney, Mrs. George W. Perkins, and Mrs. H. C. Maultsby, past president.

Mrs. Sallie Orr Dunbar of Portland, Ore., dean of chairman in the General Federation, will deliver the principal address, "The Woman of Today." Mrs. Dunbar is chairman of Public Welfare in the national organization.

A feature of the morning session on Jan. 22 will be the address on

D. C. on Jan. 13-17 for the annual mid-winter meeting of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

On the evening of the 15th the usual reception will be held with members of Washington official life as guests.

Black and White Keeps on Happening

By ANN ARDEN

WITH SO much stress put on white touches in the past season, it is only natural that we should see this becoming mode continue popular, and it is fitting that it should be present on some of this season's best, there, dark wool dresses, which tend to the prevalent tailored trimming—it is not satisfied with being merely a roll collar—it lengthens itself into a vest. The little frock of wool, coat dress, two-piece frock, or simple one-piece garment, is apt to look smarter with a vest.

WOOLEN FROCKS are going feminine. They are taking on more subtle and gentler lines than hitherto. Soon there will be no barricades against this softer mode, for woollens are practically the last survivors of tailored fashions. The fabric itself is undergoing a metamorphosis since it is taking on the softness and pliability of silk.

SIMPLE CLOTHES are the only ones that are smart for general daytime wear, and when a wool frock combines simplicity and chic, as does the one pictured—it is indeed a treasure. The model is from Irene Dade, developed in black wool crepe. The low placed circular peplum gives a tuneful effect. The vest is of white wool, and the small upstanding collar has long ends faced in white. The gamut cuffs repeat the peplum flare, are faced in white and button close to the wrists.

THE SMART hat, from Agnes, is of black felt, with irregular, untanned brim, longer on one side, two perky quills accenting the other.

THERE ARE no definite parts to a hat at the present time—the brim may be part of the crown, or the hat may be all crown, while again the crown may be completely hidden by the double brim. When there is a brim, it is adjustable, short, uneven, supple, faced or doubled, it softens the outline—there being no harsh edges this season. Brims do not interfere with the soft collapsible quality of a hat that may be in a pocket and when taken out is always as spry and span as from a bandbox.

THE LONG, rolling curves of the tricorne, its width spreading generally at the sides, the high and well above the ears, so as not to interfere with fur collars, often develop into soft, unequal points at the side. The shallow crown is pointed, though sometimes it is draped or shirred.

Wilda Digs Up History of Cold Paris

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend. He is no Adonis. Wilda thinks, but "he has a rare smile." Wilda's father died and her mother, Gracie, becomes a different woman when the lawyers say the estate will amount to $100,000. She plans a trip to Europe. Wilda has a wonderful time at a house party where Logan asks her to marry him. Myrtle, who is determined to win Logan, turns up at the dock as Wilda boards steamer for Europe. Logan's leave-taking is affectionate. Gracie finds an admirer on board who later shocks her by saying he is married. She is glad to leave the steamer at the dock in France. In Paris she becomes interested in Mr. Gigi Cortes.

By MAY CHRISTIE

(Copyright, 1933)

"WELL, WHAT of that? Mr. Cortes and I are very much alive. We're hungry. I'm sorry! My imagination carried me away. I'll have anything you order." "My goodness! Wouldn't you think a girl would appreciate high-priced French cooking?" Gracie turned to Mr. Cortes for confirmation. "The food is excellent out here," he said shortly. (Wasn't it just like a rich American to mention prices when she was acting hostess?)

But Gracie was too exultant to let her champagne cocktail and this young man's "attention" and the glamorous scene to notice anything amiss with him.

Frog's Legs

Gracie Tries Them

"I adore to try frog's legs. I understand they taste marvelously!" she giggled.

"Why not snails, too, madame? They are so good!"

But at the very name of snails she shuddered.

"Mr. Cortes, will you please order the wine? Come from the land of prohibition, I'm rather a—whaddya-call it?—a novice?"

He brightened up at that. When dining with other American ladies, the man of course he had been asked to take had been too awful.

"They'd given him red wine with the fish, instead of white. And then they'd dared to offer him white wine with the entree!"

Tonight here, however, she was so rich, he would order the rarest vintage.

The orchestra began to play a haunting air. Because he hated to be interrupted during his dinner, Mr. Cortes decided to ask Mr. Gardner to dance with him now.

Danced Badly

Clung Hard to Him

Heaven! She danced badly, clinging to him as though she was about to drown!

"That was the champagne acting!"

"It had been bad enough in Cardigan's with her mistakes and all, but here it was worse, because there were only four other couples on the floor, and they danced on a raised platform and everybody was watching."

"Oh, Gigi—I'm going to call myself—"

"—what, then, darling? But not here, in this fashionable club, where there were bound to be a lot of his 'friends' among the diners."

He tried to be made a spectacle of. He had been so interested in Gracie's dancing. He had glimpsed the Countess d'Armaucourt out there with her boy-old husband. True, she

BELL ASKS VET SERVICE AID

A bill calling for the appointment by the Governor of a veteran's service officer, whose duty it would be to assist those seeking settlement of just claims against the government of any of the states, was filed today at the State House by Representative Lewis F. Sullivan of Dorchester.

The appointment would be limited to a veteran of the World War. "There is great need of such an officer to assist veterans and their heirs," Sullivan commented.

"The government has allowed many rights to veterans and to resolve them the law must be known."

The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans are doing a great amount of this work, but there is more than they can take care of. It is 15 state agencies have been set up locally to render such service. Massachusetts should follow their example."

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned into the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It is the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger?

That's a news tip. If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Pictures of unusual animal poses are wanted, too. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use in the American.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or an unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. Of course, the first one who turns in the tip in an interesting event receives the award on that particular item. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

HULTMAN TELLS OF ICE PERILS

"It should be brought to the attention of adults, having to do with the care of children, that there is danger in coasting on hills and in going on ice that is thin and unsafe."

The Police Commission believes that it is impossible for patrolmen to do more than warn the children and that the responsibility for the safety of children really remains with the parents.

"I shall have an everlasting gratitude toward the people of this state for the honors they have conferred upon me," he said.

"As I look back, he said, "I am glad I did not start on my political career until I had had a reasonable amount of business experience. Another circumstance that I have found helpful was the fact that I was not wholly dependent on my salary as an office holder."

On Oct. 31, 1930, is a statement issued by the railway, liabilities and assets were placed at $15,321,704. Major liabilities, according to the petition, are:

Preferred stock, $1,600,000; common stock, $2,300,000; debenture bonds (matured 1927), $1,200,000; first and refunding 20 years 24 percent gold bonds (matured August 1, 1930), $1,600,000; Worcester, Mass. ## JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE STARTED AT THE GARDEN

FAST FIGHTS MARK GAME AT GARDEN

By BILL GRIMES

The Bruins cleaned Philadelphia's skates in a 5-0 victory at the Garden last night. The Bruins, who were the only team in the league to win four straight games, were led by their star forward, Bill Gaudin, who scored three goals. The game was a fast-paced affair, with the Bruins dominating the play from the start. The Philadelphia Quakers, who were the only team in the league to lose four straight games, were outplayed by the Bruins in every phase of the game. The Bruins' defense was particularly strong, and they kept the Quakers from getting any good scoring chances. The game was a real treat for the fans, who were treated to some of the best hockey action of the season.

Di Clapper Scores 3 Times for Bruins

Di Clapper had a field day, scoring three goals for the Bruins in their 5-0 victory over the Philadelphia Quakers last night. Clapper, who is a rookie, showed great promise and was a key player in the Bruins' success. He scored his first goal in the first period, and then added two more in the second period. The Bruins' other goals were scored by Bill Gaudin, who had a hat-trick, and a power play goal. The Quakers were completely out of sync and were unable to mount any serious offense. The game was a real showcase for the Bruins, who are looking to establish themselves as a top team in the league.

George Underwood WITH TANNING

Do Old Fire Horses, Dempsey and Tunny Hear the Fire Gong? Little Chance of Old Jack or Gene Returning to Ring But Neither Is Adverse to Talking Fight

George Underwood, who has been a close friend of both Dempsey and Tunny, says that neither fighter is likely to return to the ring. He says that both fighters are too old and too worn out to continue their careers. He also says that neither fighter is interested in coming back. Underwood, who is a well-known boxing writer, has been following both fighters closely and has a good understanding of their physical condition. He says that both fighters are in good health, but they are not in the same condition as they were when they were in their prime. He says that they are both getting on in age and that their bodies are showing signs of wear. He says that they are both happy and content with their lives outside the ring.

NOTHING LIKE THAT

Does it mean that coming back, Gene? "Nothing like that," said Underwood. "It means that neither fighter is likely to return to the ring. They are both too old and too worn out to continue their careers. They are both happy and content with their lives outside the ring."

Is Tunny hurt?

Is he shaking of the drub, him? "No, he's not shaking of the drub. He's just a little tired. He's a tough fighter and he's used to taking a beating. He's not hurt at all. He's just a little tired. He's a tough fighter and he's used to taking a beating. He's not hurt at all. He's just a little tired."

Only Gene Tunny wants to

Only Gene Tunny wants to come out of retirement. He says that he is still in good health and that he is still interested in boxing. He says that he is still in good health and that he is still interested in boxing. He says that he is still in good health and that he is still interested in boxing. He says that he is still in good health and that he is still interested in boxing.

A Prosecutor in Prison

And This Is What He Thinks Now About Our Colleges of Crime.

For 20 years Ana Keyes pleaded with jurors to send defendants to prison. For nearly half that time he was district attorney of Los Angeles County and he was proud of his record of convictions.

Now Ana Keyes is in San Quentin Prison, California, a prisoner along with hundreds of the men he convicted, serving a sentence of from one to 10 years for conspiracy to bribe. Another man pleaded with a jury to send Keyes to prison; another man stood in the prosecutor's place and he stood in the dock where hundreds of other men had stood before him.

He went to San Quentin Prison and in nine months there, among nearly 4500 other prisoners, he has learned something he was not able to learn in all the years he served as district attorney. A few days ago he talked to 50 California police officers and this is what he said:

"I have been in this prison for nine months and the thing that grieves me more than anything else is the ever increasing number of youths who are being sent into this institution. It is appalling to see the steady stream of men, hardly out of their teens, arriving in San Quentin. I have checked up on the records and I have learned that 1300 men come into this institution in the last ten months."

"I have studied individual cases and I know that hundreds of men in their early youth are coming into San Quentin who could never be sent here. They could have been given probation or could have been kept out of the institution by the aid of a good lawyer. A county jail sentence or probation would have been just and proper for them, and if they had received this treatment it would have been vastly better for society and for the men themselves."

Ana Keyes, in prison, is thinking straight about one of the most serious of our social problems. When he was a prosecutor, he was thinking about his own record as a prosecutor. He saw one guilty man before him and he bent his energy and talent toward convicting that individual. He did not ask himself how he could salvage the "defendant" and make him useful to himself and to society.

Instead Keyes sent young men to prison and thought he was rid of them. But now, in prison himself, he sees all these young men cooped up together, carrying a grudge, feeling themselves mistreated, learning about crime from older and more hardened men, who are technically "first offenders," but who are schooled in law-breaking.

Keyes sees now that our prisons are colleges of crime. He sees that young men who did little thinking at all outside learn to think crookedly behind prison walls. Putting them with older men in prison is like putting children who are sick with measles in contact with smallpox patients.

We do not send measles patients to pest houses, why should we put young law-breakers in contact with older, hardened offenders? And why can we not run our prisons as intelligently as we run our hospitals?

Ana Keyes, with his eyes now opened, says we should not make felons of young men, but should put them on probation or give them jail sentences or, in graver instances, place them in a larger institution built especially to house youthful offenders. He is entirely right.

And that's not all. We send men carelessly to prison. We are even more careless about our methods of restoring them to society. In fact, we have no such method. Every day men leave prison, some of them embittered, some of them feeling that they have "paid their debt to society" and can start afresh.

The State gives its released prisoners $10, a suit of clothes and a ticket to the place where they were convicted. If they can't get a job, if their old-time friends turn their backs, they can at least look up the address of the friend of a friend they made in prison and the $10 will pay for a second-hand gun.

The law is not interested in an ex-convict unless he commits another crime. And if he does break the law again, the State does not wonder why he did it or if he could have been saved from criminality. It sends him to Folsom for a post-graduate course in crime.

There's the picture and it is a terrible one. It will grow blacker and blacker until we mend our ways. We need plain common sense in our treatment of young law-breakers—probation and supervision, jail sentences or terms in a special institution, to save them from lives of crime. We need to run our prisons as scientific hospitals instead of as pest houses. And we must work out a method of restoring men to society and helping them to stay there.

Listen, World! -- Life

By ELSIE ROBINSON
If that Is Living?

A STRANGER'S letter—a scrap from somebody's life. Perhaps a letter from you. Dear Elsie Robinson:

It's raining hard outside. A cold, driving, winter rain. The steady pattering on the tin roof and dead leaves is so soothing. I do so something to me. Sitting here before the fire, I could cry out or go to sleep—or do something but I love to sit and dream here by the fire. I see strange things in the flames—ways and struggles—

—Elsie Robinson travel and work and adventures. You are always talking about such things, Elsie. Saying we can have them if we want them. I want them. I want life. I'm willing to risk everything to live. I want to plunge in and fight and maybe get licked—but whatever happens, I want to live out in the swirling current. But how can I? What is life, anyway? What do you mean by "living"?

LUD. ZUPANCIC.

What is living? There's one thing I ISN'T. I'm ISN'T "sitting in front of a warm fire." That's what most of us call "living." Mad rebellions—excotic things—these we think are "life." But such fantasies end where they begin, in an easy chair. They end there, because there is in them none of the stuff of REAL LIVING.

Living is action. Actual action—not dreams about action.

Living is doing the NEXT THING—DOING THE NEXT THING WITH ALL THE FIRE AND FORCE THAT LIE IN YOU.

The next thing may be a very common thing. It's almost certain to be a very common thing—cleaning out the bureau drawers, gleaming through that bunch of old papers, mending the kitchen door, letting down the ham on Santa's dress. A very common thing—and a tire-some, dull thing. And we pass it up. We conclude that, because it's tiresome and dull, it isn't life. Real life!

BUT THERE'S NOTHING DULLER OR MORE MONOTONOUS THAN REAL LIFE!

BEHIND EVERY GREAT FEAT LIE COUNTLESS COMMON THINGS. DONE OVER AND OVER AND OVER.

The door yawned while he did them. Rebellious while he did them. Wondered if they were worth while. Wondered if he'd ever get his "chance." BUT THOSE COMMON THINGS WERE BUILDING HIS CHANCE FOR HIM. THEY WERE THE SOIL IN WHICH HIS CHANCE GREW.

They were, literally, like soil. They were simple—but infinitely complex. For they held within their plain texture all the makings of great adventure. Into them that worker put all he had—all that he had of DETERMINATION and DECISION and VIGOR and ENTHUSIASM.

And so, because he DID things—did the NEXT COMMON THINGS—because he came inevitably to the door of the GREAT UNCOMMON THING.

The worker did not know what Great Thing he was coming to. He had, possibly, very different dreams about what his Big Adventure should be. Yet no adventure would have suited him so well as that which came out of the soil of his common chores—for it was the inevitable harvest of his soul's sowing.

What's living? That's living, son. And for no two of us will living be ever alike. For each man sows according to his own capacity and his own taste. And, for some, living will lead to the jungles or to the poles—and for others, into a quiet garden. But for each of us, if we will live vigorously, and honestly, the things that come next. OUR GREAT ADVENTURE WAIT!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling in the Big City

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Thoughts while strolling: Who remembers when they held spoons over girls' ears in curling their hair? The 42d street salesman who looks like Will Rogers. A touch-and-go in New York's winter. Wonder if Mary Boland talks that way off stage?

Jerome Beatty, a Lawrence, Kan. boy, who made good in the city. That whine from the subway—like the faraway howl of a timber wolf.

Ladies who wear furs perkily on one shoulder. George Ade would dash off a musical comedy. Marvin Mazer, hailed as another Padric.

Cops are suspicious of violin cases—they may hold machine guns. Never hear anyone say, "By Golly!" any more. Every time I write favorably of a colored person, there come circulars from the League of White Prejudice.

The wise-cracking chorine who lunch at Ditty Moore's.

Broadway and its buzzing scolders. And the cops' new cry for "Bast it!"—"Scram!" What a comedy of Roger Wolfe Kahn?

The nondescript in the little club de sac known as Shubert Alley. And the fresh-every-hour news agents flocking to Sardi's. Street hands sent to have quit.

Harry Hershfield in a big green limousine—the dirty capitalist. And Keiley Allen, called "the best loved and least read critic." Pretty girls supplant men in the box offices. But so long as there are theaters—there will be eye speculators.

Never see a shaving brush without having a yen to buy Sailing Baruch. The beautiful lady where Anna Held took her milk stout oyster spawning the proverbial pearl. The once magnificent hotel where Anna Held took her milk stout oyster spawning the proverbial pearl.

Barth, the artist.

Those basile boys with the lively patter who carry on in night clubs. But are they in daylight? Zip and Broadway night bursts into zig-zag flame. As exciting as any of those breathless one-word sentences of Fannie Hurst's. In spite of protest, this is all today.

A Broadway character of 15 years ago was a sleeky handsome fellow with jet black hair, a streak of white running through it cocktail-like. He was a marvelous dancer, always squaring about in a stage beauty of the moment. Then he vanished.

In a hand laundry on Madison ave. recently I saw him—clerk, broken and now entirely white haired. I recalled nights I used to see him around Broadway places. "My trouble," he said economically and with a shrug.

Speaking of white hair, a rosy checked young girl—a secretarial type—with violet eyes and a figure fashion experts would call superb is often seen in the 42d st. neighborhood. Dressed plainly in black, her hair in snow white. And what an eyelid!

I locked myself in my coop today to be free of disturbance and catch up with work. In about an hour a smart alert dropped in and after pounding vainly on a door shouted: "You will have to get that woman out of there!" And the way he said it, you could tell he had been about!

I am told, however, the authority of house detectives in New York hotels has been greatly curtailed. They are not, in the best times, permitted above the first floor. Their frequent blunder and lack of tact have cost huge sums in damage suits.

Barney Gallant was the last to hold aloft the Bohemian torch in Greenwich Village, but my guess is that even his night club has some untoward fate.

The monoch has taken place of the poetical chater and costlier ermine. The Greek robe has been replaced by the monoch.

And Walter O'Keefe, the munnings at Barney's, repeats a rumor there is a lot of bad orange juice going around.

From a writer's magazine: "It is difficult to describe just how sort of literary, niche, the economist fills."

There must be some name for it. Copyright, 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.

For Unified Growth

Boston and Suburban Cities

The decision of Mayor Curley and the mayors and selectmen of the contiguous cities and towns to support the $40,000,000 rapid-transit expansion demonstrates the mutual dependence of these communities.

They are tied together by sentiment, by business and commercial relationships, by the necessities of transportation and by the other economic needs that are natural to their geography.

They ought to be formally united, either in a Greater Boston or in a confederacy in which none would lose its identity but through which all of them could act intelligently and promptly for their mutual benefit.

They can not be great without Boston, which is their metropolis, nor can Boston acquire the additional prestige which would be beneficial to them as well as to herself without a union of their strength and potentialities.

We have seen Boston drop down from the census ladder by a rung or two, not because she has failed to make the material gains which great cities are measured today, but because smaller cities, such as Baltimore, have taken the outlying communities into their civic fold.

And whether we like it or not and whether it is just or not, this economic world of ours tabulates prestige according to size and confers its benefits accordingly.

The bugaboo of bad management has been hung up against our great cities. As a matter of fact they are managed as efficiently at least as the average town or small city and they are more prone to wash their linen in public. At least they get it washed once in a while without letting it accumulate dry rot.

Boston is said to have the largest floating population of any city in the United States. By that is meant it has the largest number of commuters in proportion to its own population. These people come from the suburban communities to earn their livelihood and to do their business. They have established a community interest in Greater Boston which ought to be consolidated into formal unification by law.

In any event, we want to see these transit accommodations developed without delay. They propose an extension from South Huntington ave. in Jamaica Plain to Orient Heights, East Boston, with connections with the Harvard Square-Dorchester tunnel at Park st., with the East Boston tunnel at Bowdoin Square and with the Narrow Gauge Railroad at Orient Heights.

They propose, also, a tunnel extension which would afford rapid transit facilities from Union Square in Brighton to Arlington Center.

The present requirements and the future growth of the Metropolitan Area demand many developments of rapid transportation, and we might as well begin with these two as with any others.

States Must Help, Too

Legislatures Should Join in Emergency

The Legislatures of forty-three states will convene soon after the new year.

If the governors of those states do their duty, they will submit with their messages such programs for state relief as will effectively supplement the far-reaching measures for emergency relief just adopted by the federal government.

Not until the states have shown what they propose to do to help themselves should the federal government be pressed for further relief which can only be financed by increased Federal taxes.

Many Americans, citizens as well as public servants, need to be reminded from time to time of the form of government which the Constitution established.

It is a federal republic in which the undivided sovereignty of the people operates, both through the federal government and the government of the several states.

This division of powers and responsibilities was deemed by the framers of the Constitution a better guarantee of liberty and justice than the concentration of all powers and all responsibilities in the federal city would provide.

It was thus defended by Thomas Jefferson more than one hundred years ago:

"It is not by the consolidation or concentration of powers, but by their distribution, that good government is effected. Were not this great country already divided into states, that division must be made, that each might do for itself what concerns itself directly and what it can so much better: do than a distant authority . . . were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we should soon wear bread."

Now is the time for the governors and Legislatures of the several states—especially the forty-three states whose Legislatures meet next month—to be quickened with works their faith in the American form of government by heeding the warning and following the advice of Jefferson.

The President and the Congress have led the way to relieve unemployment and hasten the revival of business.

Democrats have co-operated with Republicans in voting the emergency measures for this purpose.

Now let the states do their part as promptly and as patriotically.
